

Groundbreaking Initiative "Close the Gap Research" Sparks a New Vision for Indigenous Communities

Brisbane, QLD - 24 October 2023 — A dynamic new force in social change, Close the Gap Research, is making waves as it officially launches operations, determined to bring a fresh perspective to challenges faced by Indigenous communities across Australia. In a time of evolving approaches to addressing the needs of First Nations people, Close the Gap Research offers an electrifying, results-focused strategy to tackle the hurdles experienced by Aboriginal communities in the country.

Close the Gap Research acknowledges the need for a seismic shift in focus, recognising that past efforts have fallen short of achieving the desired outcomes. The organisation is dedicated to putting the practical needs of people on the ground at the forefront, steering clear of unproductive political debates.

Key Highlights of Close the Gap Research:

- Revolutionary Vision: The organisation understands the shortcomings of previous approaches and is committed to delivering practical, transformative solutions. It aims to uncover what works and what doesn't for those in need.
- Communities at the Heart: Close the Gap Research recognises that regional and remote communities are the epicentre of the Indigenous struggle. By concentrating on these communities, the organisation seeks to make a profound impact.
- Human-Centred Approach: The organisation's approach is rooted in acknowledging individuals based on their shared humanity, understanding their strengths and vulnerabilities, and tailoring solutions to meet their unique needs.
- Collaboration and Trailblazing Solutions: Close the Gap Research invites visionaries, policy-makers, and all change-makers to unite in pioneering new solutions. It encourages innovative collaboration and dynamic problem-solving to ignite real change.

In his final remarks before the Voice referendum, Prime Minister Anthony Albanese said, "Rather than listening to the people who could guide them towards the best results, governments of all persuasions have wasted billions in a muddle of good intentions that haven't gotten results."

"No more shouting matches – those dedicated to finding solutions should join forces with Close the Gap Research,"
